Born in Santa Monica, Kim is a fourth generation Californian and LA native. She graduated Cum Laude with a BA in English Literature from USC. At 22, after three months traveling around Europe with a backpack and Eurorail pass, Kim moved to Washington DC where she worked on Capitol Hill for a senator and then as a legislative assistant in the private sector. Five years later Kim returned to California, and since then her employment has included the following (in no particular order): waitress, art gallery assistant, advertising account executive, personal assistant, English tutor, equine therapist, C-level executive assistant, and writer.

In 2010 Kim left her full-time job as a C-suite executive assistant to pursue writing full time. She continued to work part-time as an executive/personal assistant for various companies and clients to support her creative endeavors. During this period Kim published two creative non-fiction essays, wrote and edited for Ecosalon.com (one of the first "green" online magazines) and completed a first draft of her memoir-in-progress.

In 2017 and while still supporting her clients part time, Kim felt a nudge from the universe to work and study with horses. She volunteered and cared for a herd of ten horses and other animals at a private sanctuary in Topanga Canyon, CA; she went on to volunteer and then work at Skydog Ranch & Sanctuary in Malibu, CA with a focus on rescuing wild mustangs and burros; and she completed a training in mustang gentling at Lifesavers Wild Horse Rescue. In 2020 Kim received her certification as a TRH Mastery Practitioner in equine guided empowerment®. Her work with horses inspired her to move in January 2021, in the midst of Covid, to the rural outskirts of Arroyo Grande on the central coast of CA, to live and work with horses full time. Life circumstances required that Kim return to Los Angeles in July 2023, where she currently resides in Santa Monica with her senior pitbull Blue.

Kim's dream is to share land of her own with rescue horses, dogs and a family.
